MACDONALD MEETS QUERY AS TO STAND ON RUHR ISSUE

Still Stands On Former Attitude On The Dawes Report

AWAITS ADVICE

Settlement Depends On Raising Loan, Which Must Be Safe

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 10.—In the House of Commons today, asked whether he had withdrawn from his attitude that matters in the Dawes report outside the Treaty of Versailles could not be dealt with by the Reparations Commission, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald said: "No. It has not been definitely withdrawn. The matters has been deferred for the judgment of British and French legal experts, which will be presented to the Conference on July 16. The whole matter will be considered in the light of that judgment."

Replying to Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister said that he went to Paris to try to remove the unfortunate situation which had arisen there and which threatened to destroy the work done to arrange the Inter-Allied Conference. The Government, he said, were of the opinion that a very supreme effort should be made to put the experts' report into operation without delay. French opinion was not willing to allow the experts' report to be regarded as a substitute for the Versailles Treaty, but was willing to accept it as a new and better way of dealing with reparations. On the other hand, an essential foundation of the experts' report was the raising of a £40,000,000 loan, which was impossible unless would-be investors were assured that their investments would not be destroyed by political or military action on the part of the Allied or German Governments. Investors would not be forthcoming as long as the political and economic security which the German State as a going concern offered investors could be destroyed by action similar to what occurred last year.

The Government had therefore agreed, firstly, to try to add to the Reparations Commission, when it was dealing with defalcation under the experts' report, an American member who would care for the interests of investors, or, failing that, to use the services of the American Reparation Agent-General. The British Government suggested that this gentleman should arbitrate in the event of failure to get a unanimous decision by the Commission. The French Government had wished for time to consider this and to leave the final decision to the London Conference. The British Government had finally agreed to this and meanwhile they would consult financial opinion. Unless this was settled to the satisfaction of investors, no loan would be forthcoming. The French Government had further desired to associate the question of inter-Allied debts with the experts' report, but the British Government had been unable to agree to it.

Mr. MacDonald said that he had warned M. Herriot at Chequers that the British Government could not allow this matter to drag out indefinitely, and he proposed to ask the Treasury to take the matter up where it had been left by Marquess Curzon's Note of August 11. He had further suggested that a French Treasury official should come to London for a preliminary discussion of the question with British officials, and it had been agreed that this should be done and that in negotiating a settlement account should be taken of all considerations.

Further, the French Government had desired to keep the question of national security alive. The British Government had made it definitely clear that no proposal in the nature of a military pact could be entertained, but had repeated their desire to continue the conversations in that connection, especially as regards arrangements through the League of Nations, disarmament

Electrically Propelled Liner To Plough Pacific, Says Expert Visiting Here

Mr. Eskil Berg, Of General Electric Co. Tells Of Matson Line Plan; Speaks Today At Chinese Engineers' Conference

Mr. Eskil Berg, one of the foremost present day authorities on steam turbines and their application, fellow-worker and companion of the late Dr. Steinmetz, the "wizard of electricity," arrived in Shanghai yesterday for a short stay. Mr. Berg, who is with the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N.Y., made public announcement yesterday of the plans of the Matson Navigation line of San Francisco to put in the Pacific service a luxurious, 25,000 horsepower twin screw liner which will be the first electrically propelled passenger ship to plough these waters.

The new ship which is being constructed by the Cramp Shipbuilding Company will have a speed of 21 knots and will be most luxuriously equipped in every detail. The General Electric Company which has the contract for the propelling machinery, are pioneers in the field of electric propulsion which, on account of its great economy, reliability and low upkeep, has now been adopted as standard for all the capital ships of the U. S. Navy.

The equipment of the new vessel will consist of two high speed turbine driven generators which will supply power to two synchronous motors which are directly connected with the two propeller shafts, the speed of the propellers being only 120 revolutions per minute, which gives the best propeller efficiency for this particular vessel.

SEE GREAT ECONOMY

Arrangements are also being made so that during the slack season of Pacific ocean travel, the ship can be run with only one turbo-generator operating both motors consequently only one-half of the engine room will be in use, thus making for economy with but little reduction of efficiency, the speed that can then be maintained being equal to nearly 17 knots.

According to Mr. Berg, the Matson line decided upon electric propulsion for their new vessel after over a year's study of the different types of propelling machinery; that is, direct turbine drive, single reduction gear and double reduction gears and Diesel engines.

The new ship will be the first large liner to be electrically propelled and the Pacific ocean will hold the record for this achievement.

Mr. Berg who is one of the electrical geniuses of America, is the brother of Dr. Ernst Berg, professor of electric engineering in the University of Illinois and an authority on electricity and engineering. Mr. Berg himself was professor of steam engineering in Columbia University, New York City, in 1922. He is the inventor of the muffler cut-out on automobiles, an electric cigar lighter and dozens of other additions and improvements to his line.

WORKED WITH STEINMETZ

For more than thirty years Mr. Berg has been engaged in the development of engineering equipment for the General Electric Company. In connection with his work in bringing steam turbines to their present efficient stage of development, Mr. Berg has been responsible for the adoption of extra high pressure steam in many American plants; for the successful operation of the mercury turbine recently invented by the General Electric, and for the application of turbo-electric drive to many large battleships and ocean liners. For ten years he lived with Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz who died recently in Schenectady and who is world-famous for his elecirical inventions and his scientific calculations of electrical phenomena. Mr. Berg is going to Japan for a short visit after which he will return to Shanghai for a protracted vacation. He will visit Peking, Mukden, Dairen and other points in the North, as well as Hongkong, Canton and the South, before returning home.

Today, he is the guest of the Chinese Engineers' Society which is in conference here, and will lecture to the convention at 2 p.m. in the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce.

Federal Troops From Santos Said To Have Deserted

(Reuter's American Service)

Buenos, Aires, July 10.—Both official and unofficial news from Brazil indicates that the situation at Sao Paulo is still very serious, while there is a great deal of unrest elsewhere. There appears to be little doubt that the rebels are offering formidable resistance at Sao Paulo, which they apparently still completely control. Anxiety is expressed with regard to the spirit of the crews of three warships, including the dreadnought Minas Geraes.

Powers Discuss Possible Soviet Embassy At Peking

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 11.—The Diplomatic Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that Britain and America are exchanging views relative to Moscow's declared intention to give its representative at Peking full ambassadorial rank in order that he may take precedence of the other diplomatic representatives. Britain and America and, it is believed, France are inclined to ignore the Bolshevik challenge, but it remains to be seen whether, if Japan appoints an Ambassador, this will modify the dispositions of London and Washington, although the case for modification is far from strong on its merits.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 11.—Present indications point to the Chinese Government complying shortly with the request of the Soviet to exchange Ambassadors. M. Karakhan made the request shortly after the Sino-Russian Agreement was concluded. The Waichiaopu replied that this was a new question, not covered by the agreement, and would require time to settle. Since then the matter has been deliberated on and the Cabinet may decide tomorrow.

There is a temporary lull in the negotiations between China and the Soviet as Moscow has not yet ratified the agreement.

DAVIS, IN ACCEPTANCE SPEECH, INDICATES HE IS IN FAVOR OF AMERICAN ASSISTANCE TO EUROPE

Democratic Nominee To Stand On Principles Laid Down By Wilson; "Foreign Policy" Apparently To Be Paramount Issue In Forthcoming Campaign For Presidency; League Advocates Happy

(BY UNITED PRESS)

New York, July 10.—John W. Davis, former ambassador to the Court of St. James, who yesterday won the Democratic nomination for the presidency after one of the bitterest struggles in the history of American party conventions, was today buried under a shower of congratulatory telegrams from all over the United States and Europe, where he is almost as well known as he is at home.

That Mr. Davis won a warm place for himself in the hearts of British people was apparent today from the number and enthusiastic tone of the cables from London, where he served so capably as America's envoy.

In accepting the nomination Mr. Davis spoke briefly but very significantly. "I accept the honor gladly," he said, "and in the forthcoming campaign I hope to have the assistance and active co-operation of that great body of liberal, progressive and independent thought which detests privilege and which does not wish America to stand still or retreat amidst changing world politics."

This statement by Mr. Davis was seized upon by the followers and partisans of former President Wilson as a reaffirmation of the policies of the war president, and to them it clearly indicated that "paramount issue" in the campaign would be the question whether America is to have a definite foreign policy, particularly as regards participation in the affairs of Europe.

Mr. Davis' statement was also gladly accepted by the League of Nations advocates in America, as they believe he will be sympathetic toward their long maintained plea that America should join the league forthwith.

The newspapers of all shades of political opinion unite in paying tribute to the high character and great ability of the nominee.

He reported to the police and a reply was sent to the address mentioned in the note, a lodging house. The first accused was seen to pick up the letter and take it to his room. Here this man and the second and third accused were taken into custody. The first accused admitted writing the letter at the instigation of the fourth accused, who was arrested in Frenchtown. A fifth man was also implicated.

The case was remanded one week by Assessor Martin and Magistrate Loh for further inquiries.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING FOR MISSIONERS

Boat Capsizes With Party Of Seven At Hankow

What might easily have been a very serious accident took place last Monday about noon near the China Merchants wharf at Hankow where the current in the river is usually very strong at this time of the year, states the Central China Post.

A party of seven missionaries down from Siangyang had transhipped from their up-river passenger boat into a sampan chartered to bring them down to the Concession. Six of the seven are foreigners, one being an ordained man, the rest being ladies, including one Chinese, and all were on the way to a summer holiday. Unfortunately, when sweeping under the stern of the steamer making for the jetty, the boatman failed to meet the current at the right angle, and in consequence the passengers and baggage were thrown into the water.

It is simply a marvel that no one was drowned. Sampans and other boats, on seeing the accident, went immediately to the rescue, and were successful in picking up all the party, although some were found insensible when got at. Two of the unfortunate people, all of whom belong to the Cumberland Mission, were taken to the hospital where they were treated with the usual professional skill and kindness. We gather that a large part of the luggage has been recovered, but the loss of the other baggage can be and doubtless is being cheerfully borne in view of the fact that no life has been lost. The lucky party are to be congratulated.

The names of the ladies and gentlemen who underwent this most unpleasant experience are: Mrs. H. J. Conradson, Miss E. Ackerson, Miss J. Olson, Miss A. Nielson, Miss E. Norlund, a Chinese lady teacher and the Rev. V. Ir Norelund. Of these Miss Nielson and the Chinese teacher are the two who have had to be placed in hospital.

Mr. H. J. Conradson, who was one of the party from Siangyang, had gone ashore earlier to arrange for conveyances for the party and returned to the China Merchants wharf just in time to see the sampan capsize, it having fouled the moorings of the str. Kiangwah. By the time he was able to get to the water's edge to help in the work of rescue the sampan, bottom upwards, was drawn by the current close alongside the hulk, and the Chinese lady, who was still clinging to the upturned vessel, was seen to be getting seriously crushed between it and the side of the hulk. By the time that Mr. Conradson had effected the rescue of this lady he could see no signs of any of the foreign members of the party. After searching in another sampan for some considerable time he was forced to the conclusion that his wife and friends must all have perished; and it was only when he got back to shore and into the concessions that he learned that his forebodings were not fulfilled and that the whole party were safe.

Mr. Conradson informs us that from the time of the capsizing of the boat nothing further has been heard of the two boatmen, and it is feared that both of them have lost their lives.

Chinese Shot By Arms Trafficker Dies In Hospital

An inquest was held by Mixed Court officials yesterday over the body of a Chinese named Chang Ching-foh, one of two men who were shot in an affray at 117 Manila Road early Wednesday morning. Chang died at the Paulun Hospital Thursday evening.

The verdict returned was to the effect that deceased was killed by one Pei Mau-sze, who is being sought by the police. According to the story of the wounded men, Pei is a trafficker in arms and shot the two because he believed they were about to give information to the authorities. Pei and his wife are alleged to have fled from the Manila Road address immediately after the shooting, leaving behind a 32 calibre pistol and 294 rounds of ammunition. Police records show that the deceased, Chang, had been convicted in the Mixed Court on a larceny charge.

July 1 Is 'Humiliation Day' To Japanese Due To U.S. Exclusion Statute

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, July 4.—July 1, the day on which the Japanese exclusion act comes into force in America, has been made the occasion throughout the country of reminding the people of the "humiliation," under which they are suffering and of awakening them to the most resolute efforts to remove the stain from their national honor.

Students, political leaders, and others have combined in this movement, and by means of mass-meetings, processions, hand bills, and posters have called attention to what they describe as their "day of humiliation."

The students' movement in particular was directed towards impressing on the public the duty of temperance, not in its meaning of "prohibition," but in order to demonstrate to the world the "sober earnestness of their opposition" to the discriminatory legislation of the American Congress.

"We regard the exclusion act as unjust, and demand its reconsideration of the American people," says their resolution. "We must be patient and hardworking in our efforts to maintain our national dignity. Therefore with us July 1 is a day of temperance and on that day we purpose to embark on the task of reconstructing our national life."

Other resolutions were of similar tenor, few only somewhat more extreme. Promoters have carefully emphasised the fact that their protests are aimed at America, not at Americans, who, they declare, need entertain no fears of molestation or interference.

Meantime the so-called "boycott of American goods" movement may be regarded as having resolved itself largely into a matter of individual choice. Those who were responsible for it in the first place are still urging that the public refrain from purchasing or ordering American-made goods, but as a concerted movement the boycott may be said to have failed to make headway.

Cinema-house owners, for instance, have decided to cancel their original resolution not to show American-made films and to leave the choice of films to individual houses. At present only two of the larger houses are showing such pictures, and they claim that attendance at their shows has in no way fallen off.

METHODISTS IN ANNUAL SESSION AT LANHSIEN

Thirty Preachers And Twenty Teachers Report On Year's Work

(China Press Correspondence)

Lanhsien, Chihli, July 4.—The annual session of the Lanhsien District of the Methodist Church has just been held here. Thirty preachers and some twenty teachers made a report on their year's work. In every case the schools are flourishing, some having had to increase their capacity and add teachers during the year, others being quite unable to meet the demands made upon them. There is practically no persecution of any form of Christian work in this region, and the churches as well as schools show gratifying results.

A very successful start is being made in the Popular Education Movement, every church having established classes in the Thousand Character Textbooks during the past year. The Conference took action to abolish illiteracy among the membership of the church within its area during the next two years; and hereafter in addition to the usual requirements, all candidates for baptism will be expected to pass an examination in the first book of the Thousand Character Course before being admitted into the church.

SHOW FIRST "MOVIES"

Dr. James Yard of Shanghai gave some inspiring addresses to the Conference, and also showed the first movies ever seen in Lanhsien. Some very interesting and valuable health work was done by Dr. Iva Miller of the Public Health Bureau of Shanghai. In addition to lectures she made a thorough physical examination of the preachers attending the conference.

Out of 37 preachers examined she found that all needed dental attention, 14 have defective vision, 6 are more or less deaf, 1 has suspicious lung condition, 2 have very high blood pressure, 25 drink too little water, only one takes regular calenthenic exercises, 25 are below normal weight, 3 are above normal weight. It is safe to say that these preachers are going back to their churches not only to take better care of their own bodies but as apostles of better sanitation and hygiene to their members.

TO ORDAIN WOMAN

For the first time in the history of the Methodist church in China, a woman was recommended for receiving ordination as a minister in the church. This was made possible by the recent action of the General Conference meeting in Springfield, Mass., U.S.A. Miss Mabel Nowlin received the coveted prize.

The Conference voted to establish a Bible Training School for the more thorough training of church members, as a suitable memorial of the late Dr. James H. Pyke, who gave over thirty years of inspirational service to the District. The preachers at once pledged themselves to raise $500 as a nucleus for the fund, which will be solicited among friends in both China and America.

China Journal Of Science And Arts In Special Issue

One of the most attractive issues of that fascinating magazine, "The China Journal of Science and Arts," is the special summer number just out. The cover is printed in colors and the magazine carries a large number of excellent illustrations besides some particularly good articles.

The notes on the recent art exhibition and the dog show, with many illustrations of each, will be read with interest here, especially.

In the section devoted to literature are poems by Maude Hubbard Browne, a local resident, and Paul Dewitt Twinem. There is also a translation from the Chinese poetry made by T. Y. Leo and Albion N. Fellows. "The Persecution of Shen Lien," a translation by E. B. Howell, is an interesting example of Chinese literature.

The travel, biological and migration notes are, as usual, chatty and informative.

Other unusual features are "What is Shaminism?" by Professor Shirogoboroff, the noted anthropologist who has just returned from a research trip to the South; "The Precious Mirror of the Four Elements," by Emma Louise Konantz; "A New Cat from West China" and "Forestry in China," by Arthur de C. Sowerby, editor. There are many other articles reviews and notes of more than passing interest in this generous number.

INTERPRETER IS GIVEN ACQUITTAL BY MIXED COURT

Charges of misappropriation, assault, unlawful detention and intimidation brought against Doug Kyoch-sung, an interpreter at Louza police station, were dismissed by Assessor Martin and Magistrate Loh at the Mixed Court yesterday, the Court declaring that there was no justification for the accusations.

The complainant in the case was a woman named Ting King-yung, who alleged that last year she had some trouble with her husband and that the accused induced her to leave and come to live with him, bringing furniture and jewelry to the value of over $1,000. Last May, she said, she went to Soochow for a few days and on her return found the furniture and jewelry had been removed. The accused on June 6, she declared, forced her to go to a lodging house with him, kept her there from midnight until 9 a.m. and made her sign a document making the property over to him.

The accused, who was defended by Mr. Snyder and Mr. Allman, denied the charges and said that he had not in any way induced the woman to leave her husband and had taken none of her property. The case was prosecuted by Mr. Heen.

Comparison

It is obvious that where claims are made, comparison is inevitable. Comparison of the NEW Columbia Grafonola with ordinary gramophones has given it a place in music that no other gramophone has attained in so short a space of time. Comparison of the "NEW PROCESS" Records (without Scratch) with ordinary records reveals all the deficiencies of the latter.

To hear either one is to enjoy but one-half of a great achievement. To hear them in combination is to experience the sensation of a new experience. But to hear them in comparison with ordinary gramophones is to understand the enthusiasm of master musicians and music-lovers alike.

ENDOWMENT INSURANCE — WHOLE LIFE INSURANCE

Woman's Rights

Woman's rights as well as her duty in the matter of life insurance should be emphasised. She should appreciate that it is not only her husband's duty adequately to protect the family, but that it is also her duty, if necessary, to use her persuasive powers to get him to act and if that does not avail, to insist on action as her right.

Not only has she a right to personal protection, but her rights as regards life insurance are further increased by her interest in the children which are just as much as they are her husband's.

News Brevities

Since a certain amount of doubt appears still to exist in some minds regarding Dr. Sun Yat-sen's health, it is interesting to learn that a special correspondent representing international news service, covering three continents was privileged to have an interview with the Generalissimo on July 3. Dr. Sun appeared to be in quite good health and was in the best of spirits. Among other things, he informed the special correspondent that he was dividing his time among the more important administrative tasks, revising his book and resting. On July 2 he had a conference with the Canton generals regarding measures for suppressing piracy.

conferences and other acceptable means.

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, July 10.—There is bitter disappointment in political circles at the outcome of the meeting between M. Herriot and Mr. MacDonald. Fears are expressed that the London Conference will virtually fail in its objects. The newspapers are particularly dissatisfied with the Reparations Commission being the final arbiter of the manner in which the experts' report will be carried out, while the uncertainty whether the German delegates will be invited to London in a consultative capacity or whether they will simply be confronted with a protocol to sign is a point on which official circles are urgently seeking enlightenment.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 10.—Interpellating the Government on foreign policy in a crowded Senate today, M. Poincare in a four-hour speech deprecated the action of Mr. MacDonald and M. Herriot in substituting persuasion for constraint against Germany. He was of opinion that the London Conference ought not to have been called until Germany had voted the measures required by the experts' plans. He expressed dissatisfaction with the communique issued after Wednesday's conference. In conclusion, M. Poincare contended that the Reparations Commission should continue to decide the question of German defaults and each ally should retain the right to act alone in the event of default, though concerted action was preferable.

M. Herriot will reply tomorrow.

BASEBALL TODAY!

Unless Ty-Phoon butts into the party, as the weather sharps said last night he might, the Gallopers will play the Elcano team this afternoon and again tomorrow afternoon, both games being scheduled to start at 4 o'clock.

The Elcanos have a fairly good team, and in Griffith they have a heaver who is apt to go out there and stand the locals on their heads. Griff pitched in rather bad luck the last time out, but he has been practicing all week and is in fine trim. All the Elcano boys have been at the park every day this week, working their heads off in preparation for the game this weekend. And according to their press agent they have made considerable progress. They have several good men on the team, including Jenkins, the lad who played a time or two with the Gallopers.

Jerry Thatch and his crew have about recovered from the set-backs handed out by the Manshus and are ready to start all over again. Harry Kingman's Charley Horse is not responding to treatment as readily as it should, but in all other respects the team is in fine shape. Claire and Jawn Scott will very likely be the pitching nominees for the two games, with Hudford Taylor having a chance if his flipper is in shape.

WILLS FINDS MADDEN A GAME FIGHTER.

Some sport writers were not satisfied with the "class" which Harry Wills, negro heavyweight boxer, showed in his bout with Bartley Madden. The opinion is Wills will have to win a decisive victory over Luis Firpo, the Argentine scrapper, in order to get promoters sufficiently excited to go through with any match in the future with Jack Dempsey, the title holder.

Sodom In Dead Sea Will Never Be Found

The ... Sodom and Gomorrah ... encroachments of the Dead Sea and there is little likelihood they will ever be recovered, according to the conclusions reached as the result of a trip of exploration in that section of Palestine just published by Dr. W. F. Albright, Director of the American Schools of Oriental Research at Jerusalem.

The expedition also brought to light other important facts in Palestinian research, including the finding of a sanctuary at Bab ed-Dra belonging to Sodom and Gomorrah, and unearthing the first specimens of genuine Moabite pottery.

It was carried on jointly by the American Schools of Oriental Research through Dr. Albright and Zenia Theological Seminary, through its President, F. G. Kyle. Among others who participated were Pere Alois Mallon, director of the Pontifical Biblical School in Jerusalem; Professor Alfred E. Day, Dean of the American University in Beruit, and Naim Makhhuli, Inspector of Antiquities of the Palestine Government. The expedition was in the field last February and March. Its results are contained in a preliminary report by Dr. Albright in a bulletin of the American Schools of Oriental Research just published.

OPENS NEW FIELD

The region covered was the Southern Ghor, the Southern and Southeastern shores of the Dead Sea, and their immediate environment. It was desired to explore this region because, in Dr. Albright's words, "it has remained practically untouched by trained topographers and archaeologists." The subjects of the expedition was to secure evidence throwing light on the obscure but fascinating problem of the Cities of the Plain, especially Sodom, Gomorrah and Zoar, which persistent Biblical and post-Biblical tradition locates at the southern end of the Dead Sea."

Provided with a military escort, since the district has "a long-standing evil reputation," and equipped with four Fords, nine horses and a dozen packmules, the expedition left Kerak on Feb. 20 for the Ghor region.

Until early in March no ancient remains were found, though the site of Byzantine and Arabic Zoar was identified as Khirbett Sheikh Isa. Excavations at this spot and the absence of remains of an early date confirmed the impression later more exactly verified that Zoar of the Old Testament, along with its neighbor cities, Sodom and Gomorrah, now lie beneath the sea.

After explaining this, the report continues:

"Our work in the Ghor has hitherto proved very interesting and instructive, but the apparent absence of really ancient remains was disconcerting. Plans and photographs of pre-Christian sites were all very well in their way, but we were in search of earlier data. As so often in archaeological research, the real find came at the end, just as we were about to return to Kerak.

BRONZE AGE POTTERY

"But for Pere Mallon, we should probably have overlooked it entirely, since the site we are about to describe is not situated in the Ghor proper, but at the western edge of the Sahel ed-Dra, where the road between Mezrah'ah and Karak ascends fom Bab ed-Dra, about 500 feet above the Dead Sea. Pere Mallon discovered some cairns which the Arabs had opened, disclosing pottery of the Early Bronze Age, and, in following up his clue, we found first a large open air settlement of the same period, secondly a strong fortified acropolis, more than a thousand feet long, and finally a group of fallen limestone monoliths, six in number, with fragments of a seventh. Strewn over the plain to the south of the acropolis were thousands of hearths and enclosures, both rectangular and circular, to judge from the foundations, which are alone preserved. Everywhere were potsherds and flint artifacts. In the acropolis we naturally found our best specimens, including an unusually fine flint knife and interesting pottery, one handle being modeled into the form of a human head (in technique resembling the similar 'troglodyte' head of Gezer).

"The pottery has since been examined by Pere Vincent and Mr. Phythian-Adams, who agree with the writer's date of around 200 B. C., though the former thinks that the earliest specimens may go back to the first centuries of the third millennium, giving the pottery a total range of about a thousand years, down to cir. 1800 B. C. All agree that the pottery is characteristically Early Bronze and that some of it shows indications of early Middle Bronze technique. The terminus ad quem is, in any case, the eighteenth century B. C., and the first occupation of the site must be carried back several centuries at least before 2000 B. C.

"That the site of Bab ed-Dra was not a town, despite the acropolis, appears certain from the fact that there is no deposit of debris at all, either inside the fortress (except where more pretentious buildings have collapsed) or outside. The absence of the group of massebot, which must have been dragged for miles to be placed where they are now, furnishes the solution of the puzzle; Bab ed-Dra must have been a holy place, like the alter Israelite Gilgal near Jericho, to which people came on annual pilgrimages. The numerous hearths and foundations of enclosures are then the remains of the festival booths, called sukkot (succoth) in Herbrew, where the pilgrims lived during the days of the feast. The fortress was presumably erected in order to protect the latter from sudden razzias.

"The walls were built of rough, unhewn stones, seldom very large, to a width of from three to five meters, with a revetment protecting it on the outside to the average height of five meters. On the northern side the wall was rendered unnecessary by the precipitious gorgs of the Sell-ed-Dra', whose pure waters, moreover, flow throughout the year.

"It seems highly probable that Babed-Dra' is a link with the biblical Sodom and Gomorrah, and that an exhaustive excavation of the acropolis would furnish us with much data of value for the reconstruction of their culture, and doubtless for the clearer understanding of the depravity which tradition ascribes to them.

Dr. Albright develops the view that Bab ed-Dra was a sanctuary of the cities of the Ghor, including Sodom and Gomorrah, and then points out how observers have noted the steady rise of the waters of the Dead Sea through the centuries, which he says cannot be accurately determined. Then he continues:

"As noted above, one result of our expedition has been to demonstrate that the site of the Old Testament Zoar was submerged by the rise of the Sea, probably not long after the encroachment of the water on the old site compelled its transference to a point farther up the stream. The new site was occupied not long after the beginning of the Roman period, but we have no means of knowing how long before this the old site was abandoned. The shallowness of the water subjects the deposits on the bottom to the leveling action of storms and currents so that the inequalities have been practically eliminated; there is, therefore, little or no hope of determining the location of ancient mounds submerged by the advancing Sea.

"There is, accordingly, little likelihood that the exact sites of the original Zoar, of Sodom, or of Gomorrah will ever be recovered, but we can probably locate these ruins approximately.

"In passing we may observe that there can no longer be any question as to whether Sodom and Gomorrah were situated at the southern or northern end of the Dead Sea, since the mediaeval Zoar, which must have been located in the immediate vicinity of the ancient town, is expressly placed at the southern end, both by Byzantine and by Arabic sources. The Old Testament, moreover, places Sodom near Zoar, while several allusions to the latter place it at the southern extremity of Palestine, as well as in the south of Moab.

THE VALE OF SIDDIM

"The only possible location for the Vale of Siddim, with its asphalt wells (rendered 'slimepits' in the AV) is in the southwestern part of the Dead Sea, west of the course of the three streams just mentioned and their cases. The extreme shallowness of the water indicates a comparatively recent submergence, while the Wadi el-Muhauwat, just north of the Jebel Usdum, still exhibits a stratum of asphalt. The narrow channel between the western coast and the Lisan, which deepens rapidly as one goes northward, is then the lower part of the Vale of Siddim, which was, perhaps, a bay in the day of the patriarchs.

"The cause of the catastrophe which befell the Cities of the Plain will be discussed fully in the final publication of our results. It should be stated that we follow Blanckenhorn to a considerable extent. In any case the volcanic hypothesis is thoroughly obsolete and need no longer be considered at all."

The find of Moabite pottery was made while the expedition was held at Kerak because heavy rains made travel impossible. The ancient Moabite capital, Kir-hareseth, was explored. Says the report:

"In our search for early sherds in and about the town, as well as on the upper terraces, we at first found nothing but Byzantine and Arabic pieces, but we were finally rewarded by finding great masses of early pottery on the steep southeastern slopes of the hill, below the citadel. After selecting only the best and most characteristic potsherds, we still have several hundred left, including a large number of painted pieces, all belonging of the end of the Late Bronze and the Early Iron Age, i.e., to about 1300-300 B. C. This collection is the first adequate one to be made of Moabite pottery, and gives us an opportunity of dating this ware, hitherto an unknown quantity. Moabite pottery turns out, as might be expected, to be closely parallel to Israelite ware of the same period, though there are very interesting samples of new, possibly Syrian types. The influence of Damascus on Transjordania has always been very strong. Needless to say, our true Moabite ceramic bears no similarity to the Moabite forgeries of Shapira and Gannean at the outset of his brilliant career."

PRAY FOR RAIN TO SAVE COTTON AROUND SIANFU

(China Press Correspondence)

Sianfu, July 2.—Prayers for rain again rend the air. This time it is the planting of cotton that worries everyone. The wheat crop failed in most of the province, being only about a forty percent yield. The opium crop, if one can judge from the fact that estimates of the opium tax for 25 hsiens runs the same as last year ($12,000,000), was saved, but since then there has been no rain for the planting of cotton. Today the streets of Sianfu are alive with the noise and hubbub of the rain processions.

The Buddhist leaders, priests or laymen, who organise these processions are keen weather prophets and usually pick the time when rain seems imminent to instigate the ceremony of rain-prayer. So there are high hopes in the hearts of those really interested, that their prophecies (unspoken) will be true. If they are we shall be as grateful as though it was the ceremony that really influenced their wrathful gods to send the rain.

Politically the province is quiet. Soldiers are ever on the increase. Now they have turned from illegal banditti to legalised protectors of property. Boat traffic had been resumed between Sha-kou, some thirty li from Sianfu, and Shenchow, the rail head. The bandits immediately moved from their base on the road to a new base on the river, and several boats were held up. Strict orders went out that people should be protected, and so now one pays $20 every time he changes from the territory of one general to the territory of another this $20 insuring his safety through the domain of the chief. Besides he is saddled with an unwelcome escort who demand the best of everything from their unwilling hosts. People are again taking to the road and risking the real bandits rather than put up with such protection.

Through the gloom there is a ray of hope seen in the technical bureau of the government. Already the good roads department has started work within the city on road improvement; a steam roller will soon be here working on the roads; the mint and arsenal are well under way, survey of mines is being carried forward in the hope that copper, coal and maybe iron may be found available for the industrial development that is coming. Plans for the light railway are still going forward, the plan being to connect Sian with Tungkwan on the eastern border of the province and then have steam communication on the Yellow river between Tungkwan and the Lunghai R. R. If these and possible Japan owned projects can go forward it will mean the death of banditry and opium in the province.

COSSACKS GIVING EXHIBITION HERE THIS AFTERNOON

A display of the sensational Cossack riding, with many novel stunts on the program, is to be given today at the Great Western Riding Academy, 76 Great Western Road, and will be repeated tomorrow. Both Cossacks and Russian Cadets will participate in the show, which starts at 6 p.m.

Among the stunts to be shown will be the unsaddling of ponies at top speed; the crawling under neck and belly of ponies at top speed; jumping over two mounts; lance and hurdling exhibitions; demonstrations in Cossack sword-craft, and a program depicting scenes from Cossack life—including an elopement, a wedding, Cossack songs and an attack on a Cossack camp.

The Cadets will put on a gymnasium display, and other numbers which promise much entertainment. The riding academy has been placed at the disposal of the performers free of charge by courtesy of the administration of the academy.

Admission prices are $1 and $2 and 50 cents for children, and a ticket entitles the holder to a chance on a Cossack horse with saddle, which will be raffled.

Science Probes Problem Of Sex Transformations

Is it possible for an adult of one of the higher animals to change its sex completely, male becoming female? It is not only possible; it has been done in three recently recorded instances, and probably in many that have not been observed, according to Dr. Oscar Riddle of the Station for Experimental Evolution, conducted at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., by the Department of Genetics of the Carnegie Institution.

Dr. Riddle himself was the observer in one of the cases, in each of which the animal was an egg-layer. A pigeon, a hen and a salamander were the three. The birds began as female and ended as male; with the salamander the reverse course was followed. In the first two instances the change was produced naturally, by disease. With the salamander it was the result of experimental treatment involving control of the food supply. In all three there is an analogy which Dr. Riddle cites in support of his belief, advocated by him for thirteen years, that sex is determined by metabolism, that is, by the rate of oxydation at which nutritive material is built up into living matter.

"Two of the cases occurred under natural conditions," said Dr. Riddle. "Only that of the salamander was marked by definite experimental procedure. We know no more about it in the case of the salamander than in the others. Often it is impossible to understand every term in your experiment."

SIGNIFICANCE TO RACE

Problems and possibilities of importance to the scientific world are opened up by these instances which are accepted as demonstrated by the group of biologists in whose specialised province such cases come, though the group forms only a small part of the total in number of biologists.

These examples, moreover, are of significance to the human race because of their bearing on hereditary characteristics. The layman may jump to rash conclusions, speculating on a phantasy over which science would not pause for a moment. Hence the observations of Dr. Riddle are illuminating.

"Complete sex transformations in human beings is certainly not imminent," he said. "Ultimately, yes. If complete transformation is established with relation to one set of hereditary characters carried in duplicate, like sex, why is not such transformation ultimately possible with other characters that are also represented by alternative genes or factors? That, however, is looking very far ahead.

"It can be put this way. The demonstration of the complete transformability—not a mere modifiability—of one truly hereditory and chromosome-determined character now makes it quite illogical to assume that any hereditary character similarly founded may not be transformed in and during the life of the individual. It is necessary to emphasize that the reversals studied apply solely to the individual life, not to the hereditary transmission of the reversed character.

"This aspect of our knowledge of heredity and development should ultimately prove of much interest and of very real practical value to mankind. Meanwhile a sound body of knowledge relative to its practical application remains to be developed and this field of study is a difficult one."

SEX REVERSAL IN PIGEON

The case of the pigeon studied by Dr. Riddle dates back to 1914, shortly after he left the University of Chicago to go to the Carnegie Station at Cold Spring Harbor. There had been previous observations indicating that change of sex occurred in the egg stage and this phase of the study is being continued. Dr. Riddle says: "The case does not rest only on these three instances; there has been much experimental work on lower animals, young and old, and on the eggs of higher animals, and the results indicate the occurrence of complete sex transformation."

Dr. Riddle's dove was one of a pair reared by the caretaker of animals at the Cold Spring Harbor laboratory. The pair had leg bands, numbered 16588 and 16580, which aided identification till the birds came to the autopsy table.

The pair of doves were secured January 15, 1914, and in the next ninety days, while under the observation of Dr. Riddle and his assistants, eleven eggs were laid by the female. The hour of laying was recorded in each case and No. 16580 was identified as the layer.

She was not a good layer in that she did not follow the production schedule of a well-regulated pigeon and after three months it was necessary to give the pair the eggs of other birds to incubate and rear.

This condition continued and eighteen months after she had laid her last egg, the female pigeon uttered the coo or crow of a male pigeon, and more and more she arrogated to herself male attributes. A little less than another year and a half and she (now he) died. The other pigeon had died in the meantime. No. 16580 had not laid an egg in fortyfour and a half months when tuberculosis caused its death on December 29, 1917.

An autopsy was performed and two male glands were found and weighed. Dr. Riddle is convinced of the impossibility of an error at any point in the history of the bird.

HEN BECOMES FATHER

Subsequently there came from across the Atlantic the parallel record of a hen. It was recently described by Dr. F. A. E. Crew, of the University of Edinburgh. Dr. Crew secured a Buff Orpington hen, three and a half years old, from its owner, a credible woman who said the hen had laid eggs and hatched them until it ceased to lay at the age of three years. When Dr. Crew secured her she was already beginning to crow. Dr. Crew observed her for twenty-two months, and during this time her comb "notably enlarged" and spur developed, spurs from rudiments to a length of an inch and a half or two inches long. She learned to swagger like Chanticleer and in time she settled down in her new role and became the father of two typical Buff Orpington chicks, Dr. Crew reports.

Crew had observed cases of partial transformation of this sort, but none other complete.

Post-mortem examinations of both the pigeon and the Buff Orpington showed that the birds were suffering from tuberculosis. In the opinion of Dr. Riddle, the disease in each instance produced organic changes in the body structure before the sex reversal became apparent.

OXIDATION RATE

The tuberculosis, however, has still another bearing on the matter. It brings up the question of metabolism, which Dr. Riddle regards as the determining feature—the primary source and cause of sex modification and control.

"A higher rate of oxidation," he said, "conduces to maleness; a lower rate, to the opposite. Tuberculosis increases the metabolic rate, the rate of oxidation in tissue cells. This is certainly the case with human beings, especially where tuberculosis is accompanied by increased temperature."

With the pigeon a record of a later year, 1916, gives a somewhat similar result. The pigeon underwent an extraordinary loss of weight between January and August, and then made an even more remarkable increase in weight—again in the season when, according to the rules, it should have lost. Save for the time during which eggs were being laid, the pigeon's weight was nearer standard of male pigeons than of females.

All this is made less abstract by the case of the salamander, in which the change in body was brought about by experiment.

To the outsider a salamander may not seem to be one of the higher animals, but from the standpoint of the biologist this lizard-like amphibian is a very high animal indeed. The salamander was the case of a French investigator, Dr. Champy.

It was observed for a year, beginning with the time it was used as a male parent until its dissection in the laying season in the following Spring, when the knife revealed indisputable proof that it had become a female.

There are some months of the year when the salamander does not feed. In this experiment, the salamander was not allowed to feed during still more months and then it was overfed—intensively renourished—for two months. It was during this latter period that the transformation took place. When the laying season came, in April (the year was 1921) the salamander was preparing to lay.

Dr. Champy made similar experiments at the same time on other salamanders, keeping them alive for shorter periods, and in the cases of these he found a similar transformation in process of accomplishment. Moreover the secondary sex characters, such as color, underwent change.

As his interpretation of Dr. Champy's experiment, Dr. Riddle said:

"The period of starvation brought about, soon after it began, a diminished metabolism, a lower rate of oxidation. There is ample experimental proof that a somewhat advanced, starvation produces this diminution. The rate of metabolism was not measured in Champy's animal; no observations were made. But other observations on other animals under similar conditions indicate that the result is a reduction in metabolism."

Lower metabolism marks for female, he says, and points to the salamander as corollary proof with the pigeon and the hen.

"I have been presenting evidence for the relation of metabolism to sex during several years," Dr. Riddle continued, "and naturally these cases of complete sex transformation in adults furnish a strong reinforcement to the other arguments.

"The group of workers in this field is already convinced. It remains in a large measure to convert the authorities in science who are not in this field. I do not assume that all of them will accept this evidence; in the nature of things men of authority in science tend to stand aloof until the evidence is overwhelming.

"With mammals the conditions of experimentation are so much more severe that there is good reason for slow progress in the early stages of the work, but we maintain that it is now proved and clear that even in the higher animals—and the pigeon is very high—and with adults, sex is capable of complete transformation."

Dr. Crew, in reporting the case of his hen, suggested that altered metabolism might have facilitated changes in the growth of tissue, and referred otherwise to metabolic disturbance, but advanced other views as well in outlining his opinion of the probable causes. These, which involve highly technical points, were declared untenable by Dr. Riddle in a recent article in the American Naturalist. In that article Dr. Riddle declared that Dr. Crew's findings are of high importance in throwing light on many androgynous cases among the higher animals. These cases, it is now shown, may be in stage of transition instead of being fixed.

Outside of the United States there are approximately 2,500,000 passenger cars, 500,000 trucks and 900,000 motorcycles.

The motorcycle is not only popular in England as a pleasure vehicle, but many British farmers are said to carry their products to market by the use of a side car.

The figures show that nearly 40 per cent of all the automobiles in Canada are owned by farmers.

According to the Firestone News Service, business men and brokers own about 15 percent while the lowest figure of 3 percent is attributed to contractors.

According to Firestone car registration figures, nearly 80 per cent of all the world's automobiles are to be found in the United States. Today, there is a car for every seven people in the country. Ten years ago there was one automobile for about every 70 inhabitants.

RUG BUSINESS OF CHINA IS HURT BY CHEAP TRASH

U.S. Demand Will Vanish Unless Present Methods Are Abandoned

New York, June 10.—Recent heavy imports of what the trade terms "cheap trash" in the shape of Chinese rugs, are serving to still further damage the sale or trade in this country in floor coverings of Chinese production. Conservative factors in this market go even further in their statements and claim that unless present methods are entirely abandoned the American market for Chinese rugs and carpets will vanish completely.

The New York resident buyer for over fifty retail houses in other sections of the country w emphatic yesterday in condemning the policies of many small concerns which have recently sprung up in the importing end of the Chinese carpet and rug trade. "In the majority of cases these importers do not know a good rug from a bad one" he stated, "some of them, visit the markets of the Far East," he continued, "and purchase anything offered to them, at a price," the Chinese merchants are well aware of the fact that these buyers are absolutely ignorant regarding the goods that they are dealing in. The result is obvious.

"During the last five or six months a very large quantity of low end Chinese rugs have come into the country. These rugs are made from a very inferior grade of wool containing a great deal of hair and cotton and are so poor that they will not stand washing.

"Unless a change occurs and this kind of merchandise is tabooed it is going to have a disastrous effect on the Chinese rug business for the reason that Chinese rugs are known only by the one name and a customer buying a poor Chinese rug will be so dissatisied that all Chinese rugs will look alike to her.

"A good Chinese rug has a great deal of merit and will wear for a life time and if this class of Chinese rugs were brought in and offered to the trade it would not affect in any way the sale of domestic rugs, but the class of merchandise that has been offered recently is being sold as cheap as a Wilton rug or cheaper and in most cases it has the value of an ordinary Axminster.

"Somewhat the same thing has occurred during the last few months in the Orient rug business. A great many eople do not know the difference between Persian or Caucasian goods. A number of sales have been pulled in which the goods offered were cheap Caucasion goods, unwashed full of dirt and in a great many cases the returns exceeded the business done during the sale. This is detrimental to the legitimate Oriental rug business and it is a mistake for retail stores to imagine they can build up a good Oriental rug business by offering this class of merchandise."

WISDOM OF RAW RUBBER RESTRICTION IS DOUBTED

Low Prices Causing Principle To Be Questioned

MARKET IS BAD

Situation Partly Blamed On Tire Slump In America

The persistent downward trend of raw rubber prices for the past several months has had the effect of drawing the line tighter between the pro-restrictionists and the anti-restrictionists among the British growers in Malaya. Conditions have been trying the temper of the most ardent restrictionists.

An official of the Rubber Growers' Association recently gave the following as being three prominent facts which are largely responsible for the present unsatisfactory condition of the market: 1. That estates are able to produce at greater capacity that at present, and the knowledge of this fact has a depressing effect upon prices; 2. That first-hand sellers far outnumber actual buyers of rubber and 3. That production is continuous while absorption is seasonal.

In a recent circular, the R.G.A. made it very clear that co-operative selling is not only intended to counter the manufacturers' attempt at co-operative buying but is also intended to oust "that parasite of the industry" the market speculator—from the general scheme of things concerning rubber. Apparently the Association is receiving support for its suggestion.

THE DECLINE OF PRICES

Under the heading of "Nine-penny Rubber," the "Malayan Tin and Rubber Journal" says in a recent issue: "When the new restriction quarter commenced on the 1st of May, the price, which had been hovering about the shilling mark; definitely settled down under that figure and has continued to decline in minute stages until it abandoned the ten-penny mark towards the end of last month. If things go on at this rate much longer, we shall probably have to face once more a seven-penny rubber which marked the nadir of the slump period.

"Such a condition of affairs has naturally aroused the latent critical faculties of the anti-restrictionist, but we do not believe that the faith of those who accepted the restriction principle will be very seriously shaken even by such adverse conditions. There are a large number of folk deeply committed to the rubber industry who are staunchly courageous in their belief that the present control of output should not be interfered with unless there is a very certain prospect that any suggested substitute scheme can do better. That is why one or two changes recently suggested are languishing for lack of support."

A very sensible observation is made by the same journal in reference to the American demand for rubber: "We are entirely dependent upon the consumptive capacity of our chief customer, the United States of America, and no amount of tinkering with the restriction scheme will alter the fact that the manufacturers cannot consume any more of the raw product than what they can find buyers for in the form of manufactured goods.

CONDITIONS IN AMERICA

"There is a very substantial reason for the present drop in prices in the fact that tire production in America underwent a serious decline in the early months of the present year, and we are now experiencing the backwash of slump conditions in the rubber manufacturing industry both in America and in Britain."

It is reported, however, that there has been a marked change for the better in the American market, but that the rubber growers have not yet had time to reap ed demand for the raw product. Until the upward trend in the rubber goods market is positively established, the growers presumably will be compelled to carry on until the increased demand reduces the accumulated surplus stocks in the hands of sellers and speculators.

While the restrictionists evidently are holding to their faith, some of their opponents have taken advantage of the present situation to renew their attacks on the principle. Dr. W. L. Braddon, a proprietary planter, is quoted as saying that present conditions are "the death rattle of restriction." The pessimistic doctor even goes so far as to suggest that perhaps the present status of the rubber market "is

Padang Rubber Company

At the annual general meeting of the above company held yesterday, the following speech was delivered by the chairman:-

Gentlemen: The Report and Accounts having been in your hands for some time, I will, with your permission, follow the usual course and take them as read.

At the last annual general meeting of the Company you were informed that tapping, which had been suspended from June, 1923, was about to be resumed. A start was, therefore, made in June, 1923, but as all the old areas required cleaning up before tapping could be commenced, a daily tapping program was adopted only on limited areas in order that the tapping force could be established and retained until the whole area ... recently cleaned up to allow all areas to be tapped on the alternate day. This naturally affected the output for the first few months and it was not until August that really full tapping was resumed. In consequence, our crop for the year fell short of the export allowance of 176,061 lbs. by 21,733 lbs., but this, of course, will be carried forward to the current year's allowance. The shortage in crop, combined with the heavy expenditure in connection with the cleaning up of the Estate and the fact that our revenue account was burdened with the upkeep of 170 acres of non-producing rubber has tended to raise our cost of production, which, I regret to say, works out at the high figure of 1/6¼ for the year. The Estate has now reached a normal level of working and I think I can safely say that the current year will see a very substantial reduction in costs.

Due to the reasons which I have just explained, our crop was produced at a loss of ¼d. per lb. but in spite of this the year's working shows a small profit of $1,986.55, this result being brought about by interest earned on the Company's loans and surplus funds. A reference to the accounts will show you that the financial position of the Company is in a very sound state, cash and liquid assets amounting to approximately Tls. 60,000. With the amount of Tls. 15,409.71 brought forward from last year's accounts, the amount standing at credit of profit and loss account is Tls. 17,396.26. With rubber at its present price, the Directors regret they are unable to recommend the payment of a dividend and it is, therefore, proposed to write a small amount off our assets and carry forward the balance of Tls. 17,037.54 to next year's accounts.

During the year, the Estate was visited by Mr. J. W. Kennedy and Mr. Norman Davie, whose reports indicate a very great improvement in the condition of the Estate generally, more particularly wih regard to bark conditions and standard of tapping. I am glad to report that Mr. Ratcliffe, our Manager, is having a considerable amount of success in maintaining his Tamil force and it is to be hoped in time to work the whole Estate by Tamil labor alone, thus dispensing with the more expensive Chinese labor. It is interesting to report that since the Tamil labor has been put on the tapping work, tapping costs are practically half what they were two years ago.

That is all I have to say, gentlemen. If any shareholder has any questions to ask, I shall be pleased to answer to the best of my ability.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions were submitted to the meeting and passed:

That the report and accounts for the year ended April 30, 1924, together with the recommendation as to appropriation of balance at credit of profit and loss account, as presented, be accepted.

That Mr. Chun Bing-him be re-elected a Director of the Company.

That Messrs. Thomson and Co. be re-elected auditors to the Company.

Chief Manager.

Karan Rubber Estate Co.

The annual general meeting of the Karan Rubber Estate Co., Ltd., was held yesterday, at which the chairman addressed the shareholders as follows: Gentlemen: The report and accounts having been in your hands for some time, I will follow the usual procedure and ask you to take them as read.

Although not up to last year's standard, the result of the year's working may not be regarded as unsatisfactory. Due to restriction, the output for the year was some 25,000 lbs. less than last year's crop, and although the average price realised was 2d. per lb. better, our gross sales fell short of last year's figure by Tls. 2,982.89. The profit on the year's working amounted to Tls. 4,856.-96, making with the balance of Tls. 3,007.84 brought forward from last year, a total of Tls. 7,764.80 standing at credit of profit and loss account. The financial position, as you will note from the accounts, is in a very healthy condition, but owing to the continued depressed state of the market, your Directors do not feel justified at this juncture in recommending the payment of a dividend and therefore recommend carrying forward the balance at credit of profit and loss account to next year's accounts.

Under the reassessment, the standard production of the Estate has been fixed at 133,080 lbs., making the exportable allowance on the 60 percent basis 79,818 lbs., a reduction of 468 lbs. on the original allowance.

Generally speaking, the Estate is in excellent order and there is very little for me to comment upon. Costs are fairly high, but if consideration is given to the very limited area, with its attendant comparatively high charges and also to the fact that 32 acres have, up till now, been non-producing, the cost of production is not really unsatisfactory in these times of restriction of crops.

The Estate has been remarkably free from disease and only a few trees were treated for either pink disease or white ants. Thinning out on a moderate scale was carried out during the year, 1,789 trees being removed, bringing the average stand per acre to 72, consequently there will be very little work required in this connection during the current year. Labor has at all times been sufficient, and the health of the force, on the whole, has been very satisfactory.

Mr. J. A. Castle has continued his excellent work as Manager, and the Directors take this opportunity of expressing their appreciation of his services and of those of Mr. J. W. Kennedy, the Visiting Agent.

That is all I have to say, gentlemen. If any shareholder has any questions to ask, I shall be pleased to answer to the best of my ability.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions were submitted to the meeting and passed:

That the report and accounts for the year ended March 31, 1924, together with the recommendation as to appropriation of balance at credit of profit and loss account, as presented, be accepted.

That Mr. E. E. Parsons be re-elected a Director of the Company.

That Messrs. Thomson and Co. be re-elected auditors to the Company.

Europe's Imports Of Grain Continue Big

15,000,000 Bushels Weekly Average During May Surpasses Forecast

Washington, June 10.—The European market continues to absorb good quantities of bread grains and buying by consumers is generally in evidence throughout the continent, according to the Department of Commerce in its monthly review of trade and crop conditions.

The total imports of wheat and flour during May into the United Kingdom and the countries of Continental Europe averaged about 15,000,000 bushels weekly this import running higher than the revised yearly forecast of the total imports of these products.

It is reported that fair stocks of American, and Russian wheat and rye are held in official hands in Germany. Forced liquidation at 10 to 15 percent under current market prices of old flour purchases continues in the Rhine areas while credit stringency in other parts of Germany restricts new business. The demand for bread grains in France and the Mediterranean countries offsets the less favorable situation in Germany. Offers of native wheat in France and Italy are light.

Offers of Russian rye and wheat have declined at Rotterdam, being displaced by wheat from North America. Trans-shipments of the latter are going to the Scandinavian countries. Shipments to Denmark are being shipped via Hamburg.

China Cotton

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son, Inc. state in their report:

During the early part of the week it looked as if cotton were of absolutely no intrinsic value and the market was pounded down by disgusted bulls and elated bears until October cotton was well under Tls. 38, price showing at one day a gross decline of about three-quarters of a tael, making a total decline of about one tael from the level of a week ago, the violent fluctuations causing considerable nervousness on both sides of the market and at the close, prices continued to fluctuate in a nervous and erratic manner.

As to the new crop, we think that the outlook may almost be called "average" and the past week's weather has been favorable for the plant and fairly good headway has been made practically throughout the entire cotton belts.

In the circumstances, we believe that as long as the outlook for the next crop remains favorable, no improvement in price can be looked forward to. In the meantime, however, the market will be governed by weather conditions in the cotton belt and by the action of professional operators and also the world markets.

Yarn.—During the past week the yarn market has been nervous and erratic, and prices declined some three to four taels as compared with last week's level, due to the weakness of the raw material. In all some 2,000 to 3,000 bales have changed hands for export to Szechuen, Newchwang, Wuhu, Tsingtao, Swatow, Tientsin, Fukien and northern ports.

SPUNT & CO.'S REPORT

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co.'s report states:

Prices for actual spot cotton showed hardly any deviation from that ruling during the previous period, although recessions were indicated for near future deliveries and the rates for new crop deliveries registered, on the whole, declines from Tls. 1 to Tls. 1.40 per picul lower than last week's figures. The principal feature of the week under review, and one gratifying to spinners, is that the declines registered on the raw material were more in consonance with the declines in yarn values.

According to reports from the cotton districts in the Kiangsu and Chekiang provinces and all along the Yangtsze delta, weather conditions continue favorable to the growing crop. In the Hupeh and Honan provinces the growth is very satisfactory and a good yield is looked forward to. In the Chihli province rain is very much needed.

Climatic conditions in the U.S.A. cotton belt and in that of India are for the time being favorable, so that in taking a sweeping survey of the world's cotton growth at this time and provided no untoward circumstances intervene, it would not be unreasonable to expect a supply of the cotton fibre eventuating to adequately to meet the world's requirements.

Tone of the market, Steady.

Weather Reports

BIRTH

"BORN to Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Jordan at Nanking on July 9th a daughter, Margaret Mary." 68134 J 12

A Singular Situation

THE diplomatic correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph says that Great Britain and America are exchanging views relative to Moscow's declared intention to give its representative in Peking full ambassadorial rank in order that he may take precedence of the other diplomatic representatives. Britain and America and, it is believed, France are inclined to ignore the Bolshevik challenge, but it remains to be seen, as Reuter's London correspondent says, whether, if Japan appoints an Ambassador, this will modify the dispositions of London and Washington, although the case for modification is far from strong on its merits.

Mr. Yoshizawa left Peking for Tokio as Minister; it is possible he may return as Ambassador, in order to forestall Moscow. The situation undeniably is a singular one. The fact that Soviet Russia has been recognised by some powers and unrecognised by others is apt to lead to curious complications at such international centers as Peking and Shanghai. The United States, in unambiguous language, has more than once expressed itself against according recognition to the Soviet Government unless the latter changes its political creed and gives tangible guarantees which the Bolsheviks apparently are reluctant to give. In these circumstances, it seems likely that the United States will be one of the last countries to give recognition to Russia. On the other hand, the British Labor Government, which "broke the ice" in according formal recognition to Soviet Russia, is not averse to the latter joining the League of Nations and is even said to have offered inducements to the Soviet in this direction. France, also, under the new dispensation, may follow Great Britain's example just as China has done. If everything goes well with M. Herriot and his supporters, the first step to be taken by the new Cabinet is expected to be the formal recognition of Communistic Russia. In view of this probability, other Powers of Europe are naturally anxious to adopt a similar policy toward Russia. When the Bolshevik Government was established in Moscow, the Powers appeared averse to entering into diplomatic relations with the Government. The aversion came from the conclusion of a separate peace treaty with Germany by Russia. Red Russia was universally execrated. When conferences were held at The Hague and Genoa, the attitude of the Powers began to undergo a change. It was Mr. Lloyd George who first declared for the restoration of international relations with Russia, but France tenaciously objected to the proposal. The conference ended in failure, due to French opposition to Russian recognition.

A good deal of water, however, has flowed under that bridges since that time, and a supreme efforts is being made by European Governments to save Russia from herself and to extricate her from an impossible isolation which is doing Russia as much harm as it necessarily must do to Europe and to the world generally. A sense of new values is being created. It is evident that the position of Russia in the realm of international politics has improved in a remarkable degree. Now the Powers, with the exception of the United States, are trying to befriend Russia, and even America would readily welcome an opportunity to set Russia on her feet if the Soviet Government could be persuaded to meet the wishes of the American Government and people. So far as Europe is concerned, that Continent is situated in a somewhat different position to that of the United States. Europe can ill afford to forfeit Russian trade and cooperation in other ways, while America is in a position to wait indefinitely until the Soviet Government comes to its senses. From the financial and political points of view, the Powers realise that it is better for them to make Russia a member of the European comity of nations. Russia now finds herself in advantageous circumstances, and so, in the event of her being unsuccessful in effecting an arrangement with the other Powers, it would be due more to Russia's errors than to the obduracy of the Powers.

Japan, for example, is just as anxious as France to come to terms with the Soviet Government. Apparently Viscount Kato is determined to effect a speedy solution of outstanding questions pending between the two countries. The Premier must be well aware how the previous negotiations came to a standstill by the instructions issued to Mr. Yoshizawa, Japanese Minister to Peking, by the former Government. We know that those instructions were undeniably strong, and it is believed in well-informed quarters in Tokio that the cumbrous procedure of summoning the Minister to Tokio has been aimed at mitigating the rigor of the Japanese claim so that a peaceful solution may be realised. Japan has already made as many concessions to Russia as possible and it is to be hoped that Russia may be moved to show a like spirit of conciliation. It cannot profit a nation to plow the lonely furrow a moment longer than is really necessary.

The Oriental Immigration Problem From Canada's Standpoint

NOW that the U. S. Congress, by one blow of the legislative axe, has solved—for better or for worse—the problem or immigration from the standpoint of Japan, it is interesting to turn to the same problem which has developed in Canada, or otherwise in British Columbia. According to recently published figures, the State of California, with a total population of 3,500,000, had 85,000 Chinese and Japanese, while British Columbia, with a population of a little more than 500,000, has a population of 50,000 Chinese and Japanese, and, in addition, a considerable number of Hindus.

The first Chinese to enter British Columbia were brought over in the form of contract coolie laborers to assist in the construction of the Cariboo Railway, which brought the gold mines of the Fraser River district within reach of the coast. Most of these Chinese laborers stayed in Canada, and, in the words of a writer in a recent number of Sunset Magazine, "they wrote to the folks back home, telling them to come along too." The result has been that Chinese settlers are to be found all over the Province, in the cities, in the placer mining camps, working in the lumber camps, operating grocery stores and working in truck gardens. In Vancouver, according to the writer referred to above, with a population of about 125,000, out of 483 grocery store licenses granted in one year, 171 were to Chinese and Japanese. In addition to this, there are 80 laundries, and 50 per cent. of the restaurants are likewise owned by Chinese, who employ 713 of their own race in this one industry alone. There are more than 70 Oriental barber shops, and Chinese and Japanese control 60 per cent. of the tailoring establishments.

Turning to the agricultural situation, we are informed that 30,000 acres of farm land in the Province are owned by Chinese and Japanese and that 50 per cent. of the small-fruit land is owned by Japanese and that Chinese control more than 50 per cent. of the truck-farm land and supply 90 per cent. of the vegetables and other truck products sold in the cities. The potato market is absolutely controlled by Chinese gardeners.

With the above factors in mind, it is but natural that an uneasiness has developed on the part of the general population of British Columbia, which is beginning to express itself in demands for legislation on the part of the Canadian Federal Government at Ottawa. Thus a situation is developing in Canada which closely resembles the situation existing in the Pacific Coast States of the American Union, and a situation which merits close attention from the standpoint of both China and Japan if future trouble is to be avoided.

From the standpoint of legislation, the situation in British Columbia closely parallels that of earlier days in California, the only difference being that it has come north of the American-Canadian boundary much later. In 1923 the school board in Victoria reported in favor of segregated schools, and today there is an active agitation in Ottawa for prohibition of employment of Chinese and Japanese and absolute restriction of immigration. A few years ago a tax of G.$500 a head was imposed upon Chinese labor immigrants, but this apparently has not served to stop immigration, for contractors are said to pay the tax and then take it out of the wages of the immigrants.

In 1908 the Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux, Minister of Labor, negotiated with Japan a "gentlemen's agreement" and a few years later the Central Government enacted an Immgration Act, but the gentlemen's agreement still stands and is "as binding as most gentlemen's agreements usually are," to quote again from the San Francisco magazine. Outside of the head tax of G.$500 upon Chinese immigrants referred to above, no agreement of any kind has ever been made between Canada and China on the subject of immigration, but for the last two years much pressure has been exerted upon the Ottawa Government by the citizens of British Columbia for action.

It is but natural, we suppose, that restrictive legislation on the American side of the line should be followed by similar action in Canada, where like conditions prevail, and to this end it behooves China—and Japan as well—to attend closely to this situation and adopt on their own behalf measures that may serve to stave off something quite disagreeable which may develop later on if matters are permitted to drift.

MIXED COURT HOME FOR GIRLS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir,—The Mixed Court Home for girls charged with street solicitation has now been working for 10 months, during which time about 100 girls and women have been residents in the Home, usually for a fortnight. No other agency is doing just this kind of work; the offence does not justify sentencing for a lengthy period, so it was the practice to impose a fine or a few days' imprisonment. The Moral Welfare League believes that something more should be done to give such girls a chance to enter a respectable life, so the Home was started as another contribution to the solution of a very great and old problem. The effort has been well worth while, and the inmates have much appreciated the kindness shown them. Some have been returned to home or friends, others have been helped in other ways, and it is becoming well known that there is a Home to which any girl in distress can go, even voluntarily, and be helped.

But it is disappointing that the Home is not better supported. Certain expenses for rent and other things are incurred monthly whether the inmates are many or few, and an average of $200 per month is required. The Shanghai Municipal Council has generously recognised the work and made a grant of Tls. 500 towards expenses. A few generous donations have been received, and a number of smaller ones; but it is to be regretted that the public response to appeals for this special work has been inadequate.

After facing the situation frankly, we have come to the decision that unless there is speedy and more liberal support, we must conclude that Shanghai is not ready for this particular piece of social service for a class which greatly needs sympathy and help. The Moral Welfare League has no funds for this purpose except such as are voluntarily contributed, and these are exhausted; so unless at least $200 or $400 are received by the end of this month, we must reluctantly take steps to close this new door, so full of promise to many.

We have demonstrated that there is a place for such a Home, and that it can be worked satisfactorily at comparatively little cost, and be a blessing to many. But it is not intended to run into debt, and the measure of response to this appeal will be an indication whether Shanghai wants this rescue Home or not, or at any rate whether this League is the proper body to undertake the work.

Contributions will be gladly received by the Hon. Treasurer, Rev. J. W. Crofoot, c/o Moral Welfare League Office, 143, North Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT WRITERS

By Mathy

THE PART OF ME THAT DOUBTS

Whatever a man's creed, there's a good deal of him that does not believe it. Whatever a man's crime, there was some of him that protested. Whatever a man's goodness, it is flecked on the underside with ugly spots. Let us deal reverently with one another, and with awe; we are all so complex. It should not be so hard to believe in God, for man himself is scarcely less wonderful.

The universe is just as great and amazing inside of me as outside. Immanuel Kant marveled when he looked into his own heart, as when he looked up at the sky. So the stars over me are no less sublime than my soul which mirrors them; thunder and lightning among the clouds are matched by storms of passion within me as terrible as they; my memory is a greater thing than the British Museum, for it is a living museum; my will is greater than gravitation or electricity or gunpowder, for it can use them, and they cannot budge it; my imagination is more wondrous than the Vatican gallery, for its pictures come and go with instant swiftness, and my conscience is as mysterious and as majestic as the substance of God Himself.

Let a man reverence himself. Then he is not far from believing in God.

EXPERIENCE VERSUS RESULTS

In this life it doesn't make so much difference what you have to go through as where you get to. It is not the experience that matters so much as its results upon your character.

Keep your eye on results. If you have had troubles, what matters it, provided they have brought you a proper harvest of wisdom, strength, and purification?

Our life is a business proposition. We are here to gain what we can, to lay up stores of love and knowledge, and to develop insight, skill, and virtuosity of soul.

We are here to become experts in love, professionals in weighing and judging human values, masters of self and of circumstances.

So long as we gain this end, why worry about the road that leads us to it?

Come sorrow, come joy, come success or failure, they are all grist to our mill. We will transform all of them into character. Everything that befalls us shall help to perfect our manhood.

Something To Think About

By Bruno Lessing

PATRIOTISM

"Patriotism," said Samuel Johnson "is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

Samuel Johnson was a wise man—much wiser than most of the people in this country.

But he was a pessimist and had a soured disposition. He was less sympathetic and less charitable than most of the working people in this country.

So, when you undertake to analyze his statement, you must strike a balance between the parts which intelligence and sympathy play in that grand and glorious feeling which we call patriotism.

In the United States we are all patriots. If, however, you analyze the patriotism of a great many people you find considerable selfishness, vanity, stupidity and insincerity mixed with their love of country. Many have so little real love and so much selfishness that they actually capitalise their so-called patriotism and try to achieve public office or make money out of their profession of devotion to their country.

In time of war, of course, the dross quickly sinks to the bottom and, with but few exceptions, we rally eagerly to the country's support and sing the "Star-Spangled Banner", with earnest enthusiasm. But we cannot always be at war. Most of the country's history always has been and, probably, always will be that of peace.

It is in times of peace that the lack of real patriotism is most apparent.

The average Congressman or United States Senator would probably want to fight if you told him he was not patriotic. Yet if they all are patriotic, if all the bills that are introduced in the Congress, all the votes that are cast and all the alignments in groups and "blocs" that are made are animated by a real love of country, a real desire to benefit the country—which is the essence of patriotism—then, either patriothan is the most idotic thing in the world, or, else, ninety percent of our representatives are not right in the head.

Alas! They are sane. Sane, but not patriotic. Some of them shut their eyes to corporate violations of the law. Some of them calmly accept the interference of religious domination in affairs of government, while others denounce honest men, and still others shield scoundrels.

This is what we call politics. These same divisions that you find in the Congress, you find among the mass of the people.

Yet they all call themselves patriots. They all maintain that this is the greatest, grandest country in the world and they love it.

"It reminds one of an old doggerel.

"Perhaps you are right to dissemble your love,
"But why do you kick me down stairs?"

The Pestiferous Moth

By Henry Smith Williams

There are moths and moths, but the ubiquitous clothes moth is a vexatious pest.

Every housewife knows by sight the adult clothes moth, a tiny whitish insect that flies furtively about and crumbles to seming powder if crushed with the finger. But a good many housewives would be surprised to learn that this little flying insect is in itself a perfectly harmless creature, which does not attack clothing; in fact, does not seek food of any kind.

The clothes moth does all its eating while in the larval stage, and the only harm it can do is to deposit eggs that ultimately may hatch into destructive larvae. More than likely this function has been accomplished before the flying insect is seen.

Of course, it is good policy to kill the flying moths, lest they may not have finished their business of egg-laying. But it is important to consider the possible location of eggs that may have been previously deposited. The little worm-like creatures that come from these eggs are the culprits that will be directly responsible for ruinous "moth-holes" in woolen garments and fur wraps.

Nothing can be done about it after the tell-tale holes are in evidence. The watchword is, Prevention. If clothing or furs can be so securely stored that the flying moth cannot reach them, to deposit her eggs, all is well. Hence the use of cedar chests, moth-proof bags and similar expedients. But it is practically impossible to safeguard all materials in this way. The ideal method would be to treat the fabrics themselves in such wise that they would no longer constitute a safe feeding-ground for the larvae.

This may be accomplished in the factory by treating the wool with certain chemicals which attach themselves to the fiber, but do not affect the color, strength, or feel of the yarn or fabric. Moreover, a protective chemical may be sprayed over the surface of clothing made of ordinary materials, and it is claimed that cloth thus treated is invulnerable to the attacks of moth larvae.

"One leads where many follow."

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

The Tailored Frock Is a Garment of Comfort and Smartness

Quite an argument might be and often is started through a discussion of the relative merits of the tailored frock and the tailored suit. France shows her attitude on the subject. French women themselves almost invariably choose the tailored frock, but they go on making the tailored suit for the American woman and compliment her on her ability to wear it with smartness. You will find even in America, among Americans, some women who cannot wear the tailored suit with distinction. A far better choice for them is the tailored frock.

There is an all-thereness about the tailored frock that recommends it to anyone, and it makes an almost ideal traveling costume. The sketch shows one of navy blue alpaca finished with white collar and cuffs. The sensible woman sees to it that at least one extra set of these cuffs and collar are made so that there is never any difficulty in keeping it fresh.

For the woman who likes to buy her clothes all ready made—ready to be worn with the minimum of alterations—there is always something desirable about the tailored suit. If the jacket of the suit fits with reasonable exactness, it is an easy matter to have such alterations in skirt length as many be necessary made at home. But with the tailored frock, the fit is more difficult. Any refitting must be done by an expert if the smart line and finish essential to the frock are to be maintained.

For the woman who loves to indulge her fondness for white clothes in summer, there are white tailored frocks of flannel. They are usually made with some sort of black details—a black and white scarf, for instance, of heaviest georgette, a black leather belt, perhaps little black lines of piping and binding here and there.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

ODD FASHIONS

With the tremendously increased interest in color that prevails at the present time someone has started the fad for colored bed sheets. Only the pastel tints are used, and they are selected in linen, not cotton. The fad seems to have started in England, where no spring bride has felt quite satisfied until she has included some colored bed linen in her chest. Sometimes the pillow cases match the sheets and sometimes they are in contrasting color—green with yellow, for instance. Sometimes a black hem is hemstitched to a white sheet, and other colors are contrasted in this way.

MACARONI, SPAGHETTI AND NOODLES

We are indebted to Italy for the first production of macaroni, and it is not until fairly recent years that it has been widely used among Americans. Generally speaking, all the various forms of paste of dough pressed into tubes or threads, such as vermicelli and spaghetti, are kinds of macaroni, but as the terms are generally used macaroni is only the larger tubular sort. Spaghetti comes from the Italian word meaning cord. Vermicelli is even smaller than spaghetti. Both these products differ from the larger macaroni in lacking the tube inside. They may all be spoken of as Italian pastes, and there are several other forms that Italian paste takes.

Noodles are of German origin. The German word is "Nudel."
